

Greg Johnson, Tornado Hunter Biography

Greg Johnson is an acclaimed photographer and storm chaser hailing from Saskatchewan, Canada, with a specialty in capturing extreme weather and tornadoes. With over two decades of experience, he has honed his craft and become a leading expert in capturing newsworthy and dramatic photographic opportunities.

When he is not chasing storms, Greg is a passionate teacher, traveling across Canada to lead photography workshops and sharing his knowledge with aspiring photographers. He has also authored several books, showcasing his breathtaking photography and sharing his insights into the world of storm chasing.

Greg's talent and expertise have garnered international attention, including his starring role in the Netflix series "Tornado Hunters" and his appearances on the CBC television program "Canada Reads." As a co-host of the popular "Storm Front Freaks Podcast," Greg continues to educate and inspire audiences with his knowledge and passion for weather phenomena.

In addition to his many accomplishments, Greg is also a respected tour guide, leading photo adventure tours to unique destinations throughout the year. With his passion for photography and expertise in storm chasing, Greg has earned a reputation as a top professional in his field, and his work continues to inspire and captivate audiences around the world.